Another ship for sale arrives in the Tyne

A SECOND luxury liner arrived in the Tyne today and moored near her sister ship. Both are for sale.

The two vessels are among four passenger-cargo liners which Ellerman Lines are withdrawing from the South African service.

The City of Port Elizabeth has been laid up at Newcastle Quay since she completed discharging at the end of her last voyage for Ellerman's last month.

Now the City of Durban has also completed her last run and is unloading cargo at the quay.

But unlike her sister ship, she will not be staying in the Tyne until buyers have been found.

As soon as she has finished discharging cargo she will sail to Amsterdam with more cargo and will wait there until she is due for delivery to new owners.

She will be joined in Amsterdam by the other two liners being sold by Ellerman Lines, the City of Exeter and the City of York.
